

Dr. Lori Leonard Earns Credential in Veterinary Homeopathy

Lori Leonard, DVM, of Concord Veterinary Services, in Concord, attained the credential of Veterinary Member of the Faculty of Homeopathy (UK), or VetMFHom, in April.

To earn this credential, Leonard spent three years attending courses taught by the Homeopathic Professionals Teaching Group (HPTG), in York and Leeds, England. For further instruction thereafter she spent a year studying via Skype with Dr. Geoff Johnson, a veterinarian who practices homeopathy in Somerset, England.

The credential is granted by the Faculty of Homeopathy, in Bedfordshire, only after successful completion of the homeopathy courses, case studies, written examinations, homework and oral and hands-on examinations. The Faculty of Homeopathy is the only organization in the world that offers the VetMFHom credential.

Leonard opened Concord Veterinary Services in 1993. Besides traditional veterinary services, she offers holistic treatments that include Reiki, animal communication and flower essences, as well as homeopathy. "I focus on the quality of life for each individual animal, and use whichever method I feel is most appropriate to each case, whether that be homeopathy, flower essences from Green Hope Farm, Reiki or communication with the animals themselves," Leonard says. "I have a deep conviction that animals deserve our respect and loving attention."
